November 2020

Dear Friend,

“For the first time, an election is not about content of the candidates’ character, it’s about the content of the voters’ character. We aren’t selecting a president as much as we are proclaiming to ourselves and the rest of the world what America means . . .."

-Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

This past Sunday, many Christians in the U.S. celebrated the Feast of All Saints — one of the five great celebrations of the liturgical year. On this occasion, we recognize that as the writer of the Letter to the Hebrews put it, “we are surrounded by a great cloud of witnesses.'
In secular terms, the legacy and sacrifices of those heroes of democracy who went before us, shape the actions of those of us living today. Heroes of democracy who died this year and were honored on this page, included the Rev. C.T. Vivian, Congressman John Lewis, Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, and ICNY’s founder, The Very Rev. James Parks Morton. All were pioneers of civil rights. All were patriots in the truest sense. And they were beloved by God no matter their race or gender or faith tradition. All are inspirations to us as we head into tomorrow’s election.

In his dedicatory remarks at Gettysburg, at the Civil War battlefield, President Abraham Lincoln called on the living to honor the sacrifices of those who went before and summoned those who heard his words to work so that this nation could "have a new birth in freedom." The challenge back then still stands before us today — going into this election and in the weeks and months to follow.

In her critically acclaimed book Faith in American Public Life, Melissa Rogers explores the role of religion in the public square, and the First Amendment principles that define the relationships between church, mosque, synagogue, temple, and state. Through insightful analysis and practical recommendations, Rogers inspires hope that American religious pluralism can be preserved and perfected, and that efforts to find common ground can be renewed.

Please join us to explore these pressing issues on November 19th.

Who is my Neighbor, Abrahamic Dialogue during the time of COVID

December 3

This bi-national webinar will offer a unique opportunity for participants from across the world to engage with leading Christian, Muslim, and Jewish thinkers on this theological question. Panelists will engage one another and the audience in dialogue on the implications of the answer to that question for people of faith in both the U.S. and Iran.

Webinar by LUKE 10. Cosponsors include The Interfaith Center of New York.

The Interfaith Center of New York (ICNY) works to overcome prejudice, violence, and misunderstanding by activating the power of the city's grassroots religious and civic leaders and their communities.
