The Interfaith Center of New York (ICNY)

works to overcome prejudice, violence, and misunderstanding by activating the power of the city's grassroots religious and civic leaders and their communities.

Welcome to the 2020 Annual Report.

Since the Interfaith Center of New York first began working with grassroots faith leaders from diverse traditions 22 years ago, we believed that dialogue across religious differences could and should be a doorway into even more challenging conversations, namely conversations about racial difference.

Then 2020 came, and it tested that theory to its limits.

Thanks to the generous support of our donors, we were able to quickly focus our work where it was needed most this year. For example, starting in March, ICNY reported on the rise in hate crimes and bias attacks against New York's Asian Communities due to the pandemic, and began providing a weekly newsletter with tools to address this and other concerns facing New Yorkers throughout our time of crisis.

Then the murder of George Floyd and the subsequent Black Lives Matter protests shook the city and our country to its core, causing ICNY to reevaluate where our voice might be needed most. The answer was clear: we worked to adopt more anti-racist practices internally while deepening our work with law enforcement and criminal justice reform externally. Here are some highlights of our racial, criminal, and social justice impact this year:

- ▶ We participated in weekly police-clergy conversations that kept lines of communication open and sought to prevent violence in the demonstrations in June. We drew on our long-time work advocating for greater accountability and better diversity training at the NYPD starting with post-9/11's unwarranted mosque surveillance.
- ▶ We catalyzed an ongoing dialogue between the NYPD's Chief of Community Affairs and the Youth Advisory Council of the CCRB with the help of Rev. Frederick A. Davie, Chair of the Civilian Complaint Review Board (and new member of ICNY's Board).
- ▶ We joined Trinity Wall Street, Central Synagogue and others to protect the fifteen to twenty thousand New Yorkers—most of whom are people of color—caught in a cycle of incarceration and homelessness through the #JustReentry campaign that demands the city provide identification, humane housing options, and COVID-testing to those coming home from Riker's Island.

We are delighted to have a chance to revisit these and other recent ICNY highlights in the pages that follow, from our important work with Census 2020 to the online presentation of the 2020 James Parks Morton Interfaith Award to both Marian Wright Edelman and Anna Deavere Smith.

None of this work or our growth in the area of race and religious difference would be possible without your support, and the staff and board of ICNY join me in wholeheartedly thanking you for your faith in us, and in our mission.

With gratitude,

The Rev. Dr. Chloe Breyer

IN MEMORIAM

The Very Rev. James Parks Morton

The Interfaith Center of New York mourns the death of our founder and friend, The Very Rev. James Parks Morton.

A pioneer in interfaith work, peace-building, and environmental stewardship, Dean Morton created an organization for hundreds of grassroots faith leaders from African Diaspora, Buddhist, Christian, Jain, Jewish, Hindu, Humanist, Muslim, Native American, Shinto, and Sikh communities in New York City.

After September 11, 2001, Dean Morton helped focus ICNY's work increasingly on providing assistance to immigrant and disenfranchised religious communities while also bridging the divide between the city's religious leadership and its secular civic institutions. Before founding the Interfaith Center in 1997, Dean Morton led the Cathedral of St. John the Divine for 25 years.

Our hearts are with Pamela, his family, and all those who had the great fortune to know him.

Advocacy

As a member of the Mayor's Faith Advisory Council created to address the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, ICNY worked with the New York Board of Rabbis to develop a rotation of diverse faith leaders to offer online prayers for the dead in a weekly Friday morning service, anchored by the Dept. of Corrections Chaplain on Hart Island where many victims of COVID were being buried in April. In addition, we supported the City's decision to increase the amount of public burial assistance so that victims would not have to be buried as indigents on Hart Island.

As the pandemic continued, we witnessed an increase in homelessness, hunger, and poverty, leading us to join other diverse faith organizations to call for change in Albany. ICNY's impact included spearheading a letter with the Legal Aid Society and Union Theological Seminary to request that the Governor's eviction moratorium be extended, and that barriers to cash assistance be removed. ICNY also signed on to a letter of support for Project Renewal that works with the homeless on the Upper West Side.

In convening diverse faith town halls as part of the Governor's Executive Order for Police Reform and Reinvention, ICNY is doing our work to make sure the city's diverse communities have a place at the table when it comes to charting a future course with policing in New York City. In the area of police reform, we were gratified to see the repeal of 50-A, leading to the disclosure of disciplinary records of NYPD officers and ban on chokeholds. This step toward accountability was a measure that ICNY had recommended to the Court Appointed Facilitator of Floyd, Davis, and Ligon cases against the City of New York when he convened his community advisory board in 2015.

Press conference asking Governor Cuomo to sign the new SCAR Act on September 15th, 2020

The SCAR Act Update

Since 2018, the Interfaith Center of New York, The New Sanctuary Coalition, and the New York State Council of Churches have advocated for the SCAR Act as a response to the Trump administration's policy of separating refugee children and parents at the border and sending the children into the nation's foster care system, including in New York State.

Last Summer, the new Separation of Children Accountability Response Act S222-C (Benjamin)/ A1436-C (Epstein) was overwhelmingly passed in both the New York Assembly and the Senate, a tremendous success but leaving still more work to be done. That is why ICNY organized a letter signed by over 300 faith leaders asking the Governor to sign the bill into law. Pictured here is a screenshot from the resulting press conference, co-led by the Rev. Dr. Chloe Breyer, calling on the Governor to take action. The press conference can still be viewed online. Please email us at info@interfaithcenter.org for details.

Finally, as part of the Faith Communities for Just Reentry Coalition, ICNY helped widen a religiously diverse coalition of faith communities brought together by Trinity Church Wall Street to remove the massive obstacles to reentry for people coming out of City jails. The platform for change includes ensuring ID when incarcerated individuals leave Riker's Island, that health-care transitions with people when they leave the jail, and that reentering citizens don't face discriminatory laws barring them from the New York City Housing Authority.

Education

Thanks to the generous support of Diane and Arthur Abbey, ICNY partnered with New York Law School for a yearlong series of programs, offering religious diversity education to law students and attorneys, and legal education to local faith communities. By helping attorneys understand the beliefs and practices of the people they serve, we hope to ensure equal access to justice for New Yorkers of all religious and secular backgrounds.

In mid-October 2020, ICNY, NYLS, and the New York State Bar Association hosted a two-day “Lawyering and Religious Diversity” conference for around 275 participants. Speakers included attorneys, faith leaders, and other experts on religious diversity, social justice, human rights, and the law. Panel discussions explored the role of religious diversity in legal practice, as well as the legal issues facing religiously diverse New Yorkers, while highlighting ways to work together in an attorney-client relationship that respects the client’s religious values and identity. The Hon. Robert A. Katzmman, United States Circuit Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, was the keynote speaker, and ICNY wishes to thank him for generously joining us online.

New York Law School Adds Religious Training to Its Diversity Program

The Manhattan law school has partnered with the Interfaith Center of New York to give students and attorneys a basis in religion so they can better represent clients of faith.

By Karen Sloan | NYLJ | October 16, 2019 at 02:02 PM

“...in doing cultural and religious diversity we are creating a competent attorney. Central to the mission of the law school.”

–Conference Participant

ICNY also led “Lawyering and Religious Diversity” workshops for all first-year students (1Ls) at NYLS in October and November 2019, reaching over 400 students, and is planning a series of community education programs, to be taught by students in NYLS legal clinics in early 2021. There will be 4 online workshops with topics such as: “Know Your Rights as an Immigrant New Yorker – Queens Community Forum” and “Tenants’ Rights in a Gentrifying City – A Workshop for Harlem Renters”.

Music Series Honoring Those Lost to COVID-19

In the midst of the pandemic and the need for social distancing, many of the rituals of grief with the passing of a loved one were no longer possible. Sensing the need, ICNY and our faith partners including the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, New York Disaster Interfaith Services (NYDIS), Union Theological Seminary and the New York Board of Rabbis enlisted New York City artists and come together with Lincoln Center and Jazz at Lincoln Center to offer a weekly Memorial for Us All. Names of those who had died from COVID-19 were submitted and scrolled across the screen as some of the world's most renowned musicians performed, including Wynton Marsalis, Yo-Yo Ma, Brian Stokes Mitchell, the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra, and Vanessa Williams. Through music, Memorial For Us All offered all New Yorkers a moment to grieve and heal together.

2020 CENSUS

With the extension of the 2020 Census deadline from June to October, ICNY stretched our resources and created a special COVID-19 addendum to our *Interfaith 2020 Census Coalition Toolkit so that faith communities could do virtual census outreach.

With grant support from Robin Hood, and in partnership with United Sikhs and the Sadhana: Coalition of Progressive Hindus, ICNY successfully partnered with 38 Sikh and Hindu faith leaders, reached a combined total of 35 congregations in both communities, as well as 3,257 individual community members, and 4,280 more via phone and text banking.

“New York City’s diverse faith leaders and their communities have always provided the threads that hold together our city’s civic fabric. In our lifetimes, never have these bonds been so strained than with the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic.”

—The Rev. Dr. Chloe Breyer and Peter B. Gudaitis, MDiv, Executive Director & CEO of New York Disaster Interfaith Services (NYDIS)

Toolkit for Faith and Community Leaders, which we then launched with the help of the authors in a series of seven webinars in May and June.

Two of the webinars focused on complicated grief and trauma, while the remaining five were each focused on a single religious tradition to enable in-depth conversation about the Toolkit and how it might apply in specific congregational contexts. Overall, the webinar centering on African Diaspora traditions garnered the highest number of attendees. Other target populations address were those disproportionately impacted by COVID-19, including African American churches, Latino congregations, and many of the predominantly immigrant faith communities, namely Buddhist, Hindu, Muslim, and Sikh.

News of the Mental Health Toolkit has spread, and representatives from the Oregon Department of Mental Health and The Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts have separately reached out to us, hoping to emulate the Toolkit and its success in their states.

We also held a panel of diverse faith leaders from Harlem to discuss the importance of the census for each of their faith traditions. The success of the panel, which was hosted at the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture, led the US Census Bureau to feature us in a film they aired on February 18th, 2020 at the National Cathedral in Washington DC during the 2020 Census Interfaith Partner Summit. Pictured here is Hanadi Doleh, ICNY Program Associate for Community Partnerships, as featured in the film.

The result? New York City reported a 61.8 percent self-response rate, which far outpaced most major cities in the United States.

PARTNERSHIP WITH THRIVE NY

In February of 2020, the Interfaith Center of New York and New York Disaster Interfaith Services (NYDIS) partnered with Thrive NYC to produce a 55-page online publication Mental Health

Mental Health Toolkit for Faith and Community Leaders

Learn about mental health and why it matters

Care for your congregation

Your congregation is a symbol of hope for your community of faith, your neighborhood, and the city as a whole. Beyond a physical building or space, your faith community is an ongoing and living entity that connects your members and that is the essence of your community of faith. A congregation is where people gather to be with each other and share their faith. It is a place where one's life acquires meaning. Balancing the administrative and management needs of your faith community and caring for your members and their families is a familiar challenge for faith leaders. COVID-19 has added immense pressure to maintaining that balance, compounded by social distancing and not being able to care for others in person.

If the viability and survival of your congregation as an organization is at risk, it will be hard to provide care for others. The following suggestions will help you keep your faith community functioning and help you maintain the balance between administrative tasks and spiritual/religious care.

Keep Your Faith Community Functioning

- Create networks inside and outside your community of faith to accomplish shared tasks.
- Delegate as many tasks as possible to your incoming body, staff of members of your community of faith (as appropriate) so that you have more time to care for your members and their families. Break your needs down into manageable parts or sections, then assign an individual or group to manage each part.
- Prioritize tasks by urgency: What's the most important task right now and who is the best available person to do it?
- Make contingency plans in case you, someone on your staff, or someone in your household tests positive and/or develops symptoms of COVID-19.
- Plan ahead: Try to anticipate one or two steps ahead of where things are now, so that you're prepared and ready when you get there. Don't sacrifice the future in order to accomplish the immediate task at hand.
- Maintain as much as possible the financial viability of your congregation as an organization.

It's easy to be overwhelmed when the demands of those who are dying, grieving, scared, or lonely are relentless. Breathe, identify the priorities, and then either do or delegate them. Understand that you may not be able to accomplish everything. Ask for help, do your best, and then move on to the next situation.

Interfaith Civic Leadership Academy (ICLA)

ICNY's ICLA is giving diverse religious leaders the tools they need to make a difference.

With the support of the Robert Sterling Clark Foundation, ICNY once again selected 15 religiously diverse fellows from across the five boroughs to meet once a week beginning in June of 2020 via Zoom. Fellows receive training from top civic leadership experts including the Advocacy Institute, Metro IAF, and the CORO Foundation with the goal of equipping them to create independent community projects at the end of 12 months.

“I believe that open conversation, an open mind, and a willingness to be flexible is the only way to combat the obstacles that stand in the way for a better world. The Interfaith Civic Leadership Academy understands this also, and has proven it by offering this gracious course.”

– REV. DEBORAH MCKEEVER, former Deputy Director of Housing for HIV/AIDS Services Administration (HASA) and current Brooklyn-based minister at Sacred Fellowship Ministries (SFM).

“As an aspiring interfaith leader, I have appreciated that the Leadership Academy has provided a complete framework and supportive peer community with which to think through interfaith work in a new light. I can honestly say that this program has provided me with a new method of interfaith organizing that is already proving to be successful.”

– JEREMY TIBBETTS, coordinator at Yavneh On Campus, an initiative building local Jewish communities on over 40 college campuses.

“I am thankful for the opportunity to listen and learn from my fellow cohort members and to also share my perspectives. While we are all passionate about our work and the communities we serve, ICLA, through its workshops, made us all realize that we have strength in numbers and our work should stretch far and beyond the boundaries that are set up to handicap us regardless of religion, race, gender, or identity.”

– VIJAH RAMJATTAN, founder of the United Madrassi Association Inc. (UMA), committed to bringing about unity & ecological justice within the Madrassi/Tamil Diaspora.

Being Together While We're Apart: Building Community and Providing Care in the Pandemic and Beyond

The social distancing and self-isolation required to fight the COVID pandemic have cast a stark new light on the human need for social and emotional connection. Faith communities have responded to this crisis of connection by developing new forms of religious practice online, and mental health care providers have offered tele-mental health services on an unprecedented scale.

On July 22, the Interfaith Center of New York, the Psychotherapy and Spirituality Institute, and the Jewish Board of Family and Children's Services hosted a full day, New York State accredited online conference for social workers and their colleagues. The conference explored the strengths and weaknesses of online care and community building, and how accessible these forms of virtual engagement might be to all New Yorkers.

"I have found myself thinking about and reflecting about yesterday's conference off and on all day...the speakers were stunning, the schedule was perfect and the technology was flawless. I learned, was inspired and grew—and will take much of what I encountered into my teaching. Heartfelt thanks for the opportunity."

ICNY's podcast "Interfaith Matters"

ICNY's podcast series explores the intersection of faith and social justice. Since its launch in 2016, the series has interviewed leaders from many diverse traditions and communities, educating people about the faith practices of their neighbors, and exploring how faith leadership can activate communities to address social justice concerns.

Treasurer's Report

COVID-19 clearly had a disruptive impact on nonprofit entities, with over 40% of surveyed nonprofits seeing a year over year decline in private donations and 75% needing to make budget cuts in response¹. We are grateful to our generous donors who ensured that ICNY was impacted less than many of our peer organizations. The necessary decision to shift our annual gala to a virtual format had a negative impact of $95,000, but this was more than offset by an extraordinarily generous one-time private donation shortly after our fiscal year end.

ICNY enjoyed its best year in five years on the foundation grant side. Significant grant support from Trinity Wall Street, the Robert Sterling Clark Foundation, and Diane and Arthur Abbey contributed in fiscal 2020 made possible both new and continued programming. We are investing a small amount of incremental funds to improve our foundation process, with Jonill Mayer our Development Director moving her role from four days per week to full time. Our expectation is that this will provide a strong return on investment as she provides leadership and focus to complement the historic efforts of our program staff.

The combination of individual and grant support allowed ICNY to maintain its staff team without furloughs or layoffs. This talented and dedicated group of professionals carried on their work without missing a beat, despite significant challenges of social distancing requirements and the need to change historic program delivery models. We applaud their resolve and creativity.

Our budget for fiscal 2021 is essentially flat vs. fiscal 2020. Sufficient cuts were found in the administrative expense category to ensure a full continuation of our programs. Fundraising challenges are expected to persist in fiscal 2021, with our gala again being moved to an online format. This suspension of a historically significant source of funding does create challenges. We are thankful again both that we are an organization built on faith, and that we have committed and dedicated supporters for our mission.

Former Manhattan Borough President, Board Member, ICNY

Please join us in welcoming our four new Board Members

Faria Abedin has been involved in numerous philanthropic and community outreach efforts. She currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Trenton Area Soup Kitchen, Women for Women International's Global Board of Directors and the NYU President's Global Council. In addition, she serves on the NJ Homeland Security Interfaith Advisory Council, Shoulder To Shoulder Advisory Board and the leadership of the Mizaan Retreat, hosted annually by Princeton University's Muslim Life program. In years prior, Faria served as a board member of Habitat for Humanity, Meals on Wheels, Medina Clinic, Duke Islamic Studies Center, and the Duke Kenan Institute for Ethics. She has served as Board President of the Princeton Girlchoir and the Sisterhood of Salaam Shalom. Faria holds a B.S. in Electrical Engineering from the University of Maryland and an M.S. in Computer Science from The Johns Hopkins University.

Steven Chananie is a healthcare regulatory attorney with a deep knowledge of and experience with state and federal regulatory issues. He has, for instance, been deeply involved in regulatory due diligence for major transactions and has worked with clients on an ongoing basis as an advisor to their compliance program staff, legal counsel's office, and Board of Directors. Prior to entering private practice, Steven was Chief of Appeals at the Queens County District Attorney's Office (1993 - 1996), Counsel to Field Operations, and chief appellate counsel at the New York State Organized Crime Task Force (1987 - 1993), and an Assistant District Attorney at the Manhattan District Attorney's Office (1983 - 1987). Steven has also taught Healthcare Law, Appellate Advocacy and Criminal Procedure as an adjunct professor at Brooklyn and Pace Law Schools. He is also presently enrolled at the Union Theological Seminary in the Masters of Divinity program.

A Presbyterian minister in the Presbytery of New York City, Frederick A. Davie joined Union Theological Seminary in the City of New York on August 15, 2011, as Executive Vice President. He came to Union from the Arcus Foundation, where he served as Interim Executive Director and Senior Director of the Social Justice and LGBT Programs. As a Program Officer at the Ford Foundation, Mr. Davie developed a national program to support local faith-based and community juvenile justice programs to reduce rates of incarceration and recidivism. Mr. Davie has also served in a number of leadership roles in public administration for the City of New York, including Deputy Borough President of Manhattan, and Chief of Staff to the Deputy Mayor for Community and Public Affairs. He was appointed by Mayor de Blasio as acting chair of the Civilian Complaint Review Board (CCRB) in April of 2017, chair in April of 2018, and reappointed chair in July of 2020 by Mayor de Blasio and Speaker of the City Council Corey Johnson. In June of 2020, Rev. Davie was appointed to the US Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF) by US Senator Charles Schumer.

Steven Waldman is the President and Co-Founder of Report for America, an initiative of the GroundTruth Project. He crafted the plan for it after authoring the Federal Communications Commission landmark report "Information Needs of Communities," which NPR described as "one of the most comprehensive overviews of the U.S. media ever produced." An experienced entrepreneur, he co-founded the multi-faith religion website Beliefnet.com, which won the National Magazine Award, and LifePosts.com, a platform for online memorials. Earlier, he was National Editor of U.S. News & World Report and National Correspondent for Newsweek. He was Senior Advisor to the CEO of the Corporation for National Service and wrote a book on the creation of AmeriCorps called "The Bill." He's also the author of the national bestseller, "Founding Faith."
